Minas has been a devotee of Mykonos and a fervent admirer of the island. He is not a jeweller or a designer, but a bohemian poet of shapes, an artist whose works are brilliant and refined, like jewellery. He says of his creations that, "For me they're not jewellery, they're little sculptures" and goes on to explain, "I create shapes. Because the shapes are made of gold and silver, they call them jewellery". Insisting on perfection for years, his art is presented through an archaic severity, but also a fluidity that breathes life into his artwork. On September 5, he'll celebrate his 80th birthday and his gift will also be made from art and culture. It's the opening of the exhibition, hosted by Benaki Museum, titled Minas "Clarity of Shapes". The exhibition includes approximately 40 black and white photos by C. Coutayar, "silver prints" on archival paper, numbered and signed, by the photographer, that will be exhibited until September 9, 2018. C. Coutavar's photos will present portraits of unconventional people of today, of all ages, dressed with Minas' jewellery. At the same time, in specially designed by him cases, some representative creations of the designer, that are worn by the models in the photos will be exhibited.

PETER MCDONALD

Peter McDonald (born 1973, Tokyo, Japan) lives and works in Tokyo and London. McDonald creates colorful painting compositions depicting scenes from everyday life of all of us, such as social appearances and gymnastics classes. So he draws his heroes only in social connotations where they spend well interacting with each other. His last solo exhibition was a year ago at Kate Mac Garry Gallery in London. In 2008 McDonald won the John Moore Painting Prize. Visit the exhibition until September 28, 2018.

BEYOND TRENDS

Patrick Norguet is a Mykonos entbusiast and draws inspiration from its serenity to design timeless and joyous objects like the ones that decor Bill& Coo. INTERVIEW. IRAS SINBALIA

Is there a relationship between fashion and design?

That which goes out of fashion becomes part of our tradition. That which disappears from our tradition is reborn in fashion." This quotation by philosopher Jean Baudrillard summarizes my interests regarding my work – designing products that are just right, timeless and joyous, beyond fashion and trends. Fashion is interesting but varies according to the seasons: my work involves issues that extend over longer periods of time.

What was your biggest dream in life?

My biggest dream is to continue to dream every day and to share my dreams with those closest to me.

Do you draw inspiration from Mykonos? In what way?

Mykonos is a serene place, and I need this serenity to design and take the time to think about new projects.

I love being far from the hustle and bustle of the city, to remove myself in order to be immersed in the creative process. Tranquility is one of the essential ingredients of my inspiration.

How are your creations with Bill and Coo connected to the global hospitality concept?

Hospitality, and in particular Bill&Coo Mykonos, is above all a place of tranquility and excellence; more than a hotel, it exemplifies the art of living! It is a place that evokes a luxurious atmosphere – its setting, its services, its uniqueness and the fastidiousness of its decorations.

I am ecstatic that my creations are part of the décor, as they also evoke a certain level of refinement and modernity that contributes to making Bill & Coo unique.

Would you consider your aesthetic approach to be closer to the French or the Italian style? Could it even be considered a touch Scandinavian?

I do not think aesthetics are so clearly defined in my line of work, and I do not approach my projects from this perspective. Every single one of my creations is contextual and my inspiration stems from distinctive features: materials, factories, clients, processes, machines... Through my designs I aim to find what seems correct in the arrangement of the details, materials and forms. Much like a writer, my work consists of putting the most relevant "words" together to create meaning and thus, to narrate stories.

Do you believe in archetypes in the conception or creation process?

Yes, of course archetypes exist: they are part of our culture. I particularly love to be inspired by them, since creation is always based on our heritage. This allows us to design our contemporary world. Modernity without archetypes is not really modern at all!

What future is there for furniture design?

A complicated future, much like many other sectors. There is a saturation of offerings and of copying, and more and more we are living in a world of fleeting images.

Yet, objects and furniture are not designed to be transient or ephemeral. Thus, it is important for a designer to create unique products, of great quality.

There will always be people who understand the stories of shapes and forms, since what is "beautiful" is able to improve our lives and our surroundings considerably.

In your opinion, which material seems to be the most inflexible and require the most patience? Is there one you would like to "tame" in the future in order to try something different?

I like materials quite a bit, but above all, I prefer the processes that allow for their manipulation. It is interesting to push the limits. My passion is to work with the actors of these transformations and with the application of matter. And often, innovation stems from challenging stems from challenging this process and from experimentation.

Besides, I do not have any preferred materials: they are all available to me and I look to put them together, much like a chef, to add just the right flavour to my creations.

"Much like a writer, my work consists of putting the most relevant "words" together to create meaning and thus, to narrate stories". Just like the "Kobi" creation, a chair with shell in enamelled or chromed steel.

PREMIERE BEAUTE

We met Didier and Sopbie Guillon, founders of the renown Valmont bouse in the occasion of Valmont Spa in Bill & Goo. Interview: Ira SIMBALIA

You're the leader of a company that is at the forefront in the beauty. What does beauty mean to you?

Didier: My answer will be very simple, but will not be focused on the cosmetic, which is our core business. It will be in relation with art. The claim of the group is, when art meets beauty and if you ask me, what does beauty mean for you, I would say, art. Why art? Because it's a tool of differentiation for our company, it's a way to show to our clients that, we're not just selling cosmetic products, but we also want them to participate, to share emotions through experience.

In what way do you approach emotion Mr. Guillon? What do you think emotion has to do with your conception of beauty?

Didier: If I organise an exhibition in Hydra, I select the art works to give to the visitors, the maximum of emotion. It's my choice, of course, I will create a concept of the exhibition, to bring them the possibility to feel emotion and they see the exhibition.

Many painters and artists have talked and been involved with the case of beauty, so I think it's very relevant to the Valmont approach to beauty. So, what about the philosophy of your company?

Sophie: I have my own vision of beauty as well. There's something more basic and classical in the minds of people, in terms of beauty, but beauty, when I think of it in a Swiss way, is scientific beauty. For me beauty is definitely the outlook of harmony, that you have on your face, while not bringing you artificial beauty, meaning colourful things to put on your face, we put on your face, health and a healthy skin. It means, we really work on the skin. It is very important for us, because then you have a very strong and steady roots, of what we call beauty. Switzerland has a long tradition of beauty, but it's more internal beauty, in terms of science, everything you swallow or go and see on your face. The creams of Valmont are very much linked to science, so that's why this is for us the food for the skin, but healthy food. So, I always say, we do not make a woman beautiful, because if she's ugly, it's her problem, but, we will make her skin look very radiant and healthy. Everybody says, we can see an improvement on our skin, when they apply Valmont. And the way Didier has given another dimension to beauty, is the fact that he's adding art to our world. So, my view is very scientific, very basic, but the concept we do is as I said, the higher your age is, the lower your firmness is, so, it's like a mathematical function and mathematics started in Greece, so we have all the philosophic people and the mathematicians are all from Greece, that's our basis and from there, we have added an emotion into our world of seriousness, of Switzerland.

Is there a stable philosophy that characterises you through all these years? What is the core of your philosophy? You talked about emotion.

Didier: We started from a clinic with this notion of efficacy. It's cold. Cold means, we want to be the best in terms of efficiency, it's the objective of Valmont. But today, the clients, of course they want the efficacy, but they want also to discover other worlds and it's why we like Bill & Coo, because I was yesterday at Bill & Coo, I had this opportunity to have this very innovative diner. It's why people also want to share. It's not black and white. You can have some great area. Sophie is right. The emotion is new, but it's a trend. It's something we want. But at the top of it, I would say that as we want to transfer our company to our children and to our daughter, we need to have something sustainable. We need to have something which has a strong DNA and we don't change, we cannot change the DNA, otherwise for the next generation, it would be impossible to manage the company. Sophie: The philosophy started from a search of excellence, in terms of ingredients

Clients want efficacy but tbeyt also search for new worlds

the guests

and formulas and the latest procedures and processes inside the formulas. I would say it has changed a little bit, to integrate the research of global emotions and global experiences, including the emotions and sharing of visual beauty, in terms of art.

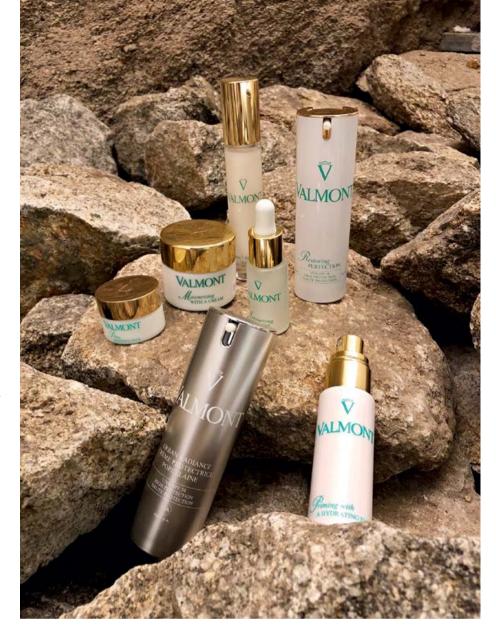

What is it that excites you in your work?

Didier: When Sophie is launching a new product, she asks me to come up with a design for the communication visual, so yes, we share this. But my emotion, I have it when I visit a gallery or I see a new artist. For example, this morning I discovered a new artist I didn't know. She's doing crazy artwork and my dream is to have one of her artworks in the department store in Lausanne. Something totally crazy.

Sophie: My excitement is that I have a special view of the ingredients. So, when you have a classic presentation in terms of new ingredients coming up on the market, I will not take it in the way it's primarily meant. I like a way to divert it, to integrate it into another concept. That makes the special way of doing things and treating things in Valmont. This is what drives me, this is what thrills me. Because science has no limits and there's always a new discovery and there's always something that I can grab, to improve the thing and to make it better for my lady customer. This is my thrill.

Can you share with us some important milestones in the course of Valmont?

Sophie: In terms of cosmetics, our formulas are quite difficult to imitate, but the most important and the most difficult one is the renewing pack. For a long time they have tried to copy it and it's rather difficult, because it's a very, very simple formula, but I improved by giving it more core, more body to the formula, so it's still fresh, it's lightweight, but it's there and you can see the difference before and after applying it, so you can see the efficacy in five minutes, so this is what gave us the opportunity to be adored by many, many women in the world. So, that was out of a very light formula. Something that you can see spectacularly in a few minutes on your skin. So, this is what I think the magic of Valmont is. And the other one is the time after intensive treatment, , that does hydration, anti-wrinkle, anti-lack of elasticity radiance and it takes out everything of our four lines in the brand and comes up to 19% concentration of ingredients and all this is vectorised by an (nano) immersion. So, definitely for me, it's this element of science what makes me too enthusiastic. So, that's a very intensive treatment.

So, that was out of a very light formula.

What's the major change in how women approach beauty and care in the last 12 years?

Sophie: Plenty. They're much younger than before and much more beautiful. We in cosmetics were smart enough to go together with aesthetic medicine. Because, the injection is good, but if you put it together with a wonderful, efficient cream, then you will reach skyhigh, the most beautiful glow you will ever have. So now, the injections are much more precise, nicer, more subtle as well and what we in terms of cosmetics have improved is the sensory experience of the scientific ingredients. So today, you don't have to have a plaster to put on your skin, if you want to have efficient cosmetics, you can mix both, you can mix a wonderful touch and a fascinating recipe. So, this is the main progress, the ingredients are getting smaller and smaller, so they really hit the target inside your skin. So this is our mission. Not to have a wonderful formula on paper, but to get the formula in the deepest part of your skin, to act where it is needed to. That's the progress. The vectorisation, the way we take the ingredients and the way we combine with aesthetic medicine.

FRESH THOUGHTS

It began as a schoolwork with spontaneity and love for bealthy eating and ended up an interesting book with prescriptions for proper nutrition, something that Stella Sterkoudis loves and has made ber way of life as an author. INTERVIEW: LDIA SKALTSA you inspired the title of the book? You are 16 years old, only.

How were

After some time of reflection I found the title «The way you eat is the way you love yourself!» adequate. Since I am writing about healthy food, I thought that people should feel happy after meals.

Do you believe, generally, that the people have a bad nutrition?

I believe that 60% to 70% of our health depends on a proper diet. Of course, environment and culture play a certain role, but in general it is important to find and keep a healthy balance.

Would you ever think of becoming a businesswoman in Mykonos, based on your nutritional views?

My roots are in Switzerland and I think that I am still too young somehow to commit myself yet. On the other hand, my family is working in the catering trade as well as in the fashion industry so I might consider challenging possibilities for sure. The kind of cuisine we are talking about has become sort of a lifestyle having spread around the world lately. Mykonos still has some catch-up potential!

At the party you are organizing in Switzerland, have you added cooking recipes from your book and if so, what is the response of your guests?

No, we did not. But you will find two or three greek recipes in my book. It would have been too early for me to do so anyway, as I am

"The way you eat is the way you love yourself because the 60% to 70% of our health depends on a proper diet," says Stella Sterkoudis still a student and do not have the time that is needed. It would also be difficult to change the party menu as a perfect combination of great Greek food and drink is served at the event. I really love it.

Writing started from a need or hobby? Do you intend to evolve it?

It started as a project for the school diploma aiming at producing a small booklet.

I regularly involved family and friends to choose the dishes and then I cooked the meals for them. They mostly found my food great and delicious. Trying new things is really motivating and fascinating. In the end I had collected more than fifty recipes.

Mykonos is connected with your family. What does it mean to you?

My parents got married in Mykonos and I have been christened in Mykonos. I spent my summer holidays in Mykonos every year since I have been born. Thanks to a few fantastic people we got to know during this time, the island and Bill & Coo became our second home. Mykonos is magic and inspiring.

What are your personal eating habits?

I am not eating 100% vegan and sugar-free. Just 100% gluten-free, since I have an allergic reaction to gluten. Organic products are a must!

MYKONOS WHITE PARTY

I am so excited!

KAUFLEUTEN KLUB, Zurich 9/6/2018

The Aegean Sea's white, the colour that illuminates Mykonos and makes it shine, travels 2.700 km away, bringing the cosmopolitan island's imprint. The Mykonos White Party, conceived and created (for more than 12 years) by the brothers and second generation Greeks, Stelios and Sakis Sterkoudis is THE event of every summer in Zurich. Over 3,000 Swiss dress in all white and converge on the six different stages of the Kaufleuten club to pay homage to Greek know-how in the domain of quality partying, to the sounds of disco and house. Top models, bankers, Olympic medallists and regular folk from Zurich again this year made their - white - presence felt under the gigantic installation representing the windmills, the Aegean and the – like cubes of white sugar – Mykonian houses.

BILL & COO @ MYKONOS WHITE PARTY

Like the five past years, the highlight of Mykonos White Party is the restaurant team from Bill & Coo Suites & Lounge which undertakes the culinary "re-enactment" of a big fat Greek meal. The dishes (presenting a wide variety of authentic Greek and Mediterranean tastes with a twist) are being prepared in the club's cavernous kitchens by a strong team. Different buffets are set up in three rooms and yes they are better than any home cooked Greek food we have ever eaten.

TEMPLE OF WELL-BEING

With the Valmont seal, the brand new Bill & Coo Spa is a destination that will carry you on a unique journey of relaxation.

Valmont for Bill & Coo Wellness Spa Suites is the new sanctuary for rejuvenation, a valuable part of the #billandcoowayoflife. It first opened its doors in June 2017, redefining the term wellness and body rejuvenation in a space that combines a relaxing atmosphere with quality Valmont services. The Valmont for Bill & Coo Wellness Spa, a truly special space, was designed by k-studio architecture firm. Its main features include special suites for luxury treatments built with traditional Mykonian elements, such as marble, stone and wood, ideal for creating an atmosphere and ideal setting for a unique wellness experience. Guests can combine amazing treatments by Swiss Valmont and relaxing massages with Kos Paris essential oils. They may also enjoy the Spa Suites services: dual treatment beds, a separate living space for lounging and dining and spacious private bathroom and changing area. They can also choose the Wellness Spa Suite that features a sauna, steam room and Jacuzzi, or the Spa Suite equipped with a Jacuzzi to share a special, relaxing spa experience with their loves ones. In order to enhance their well-being experience, there is also an a la carte Wellness Spa Suite Menu, specially designed by the hotel's chefs. The collaboration of Valmont with Bill & Coo offers guests a unique beauty and wellness programme.

The palette of materials used for the Spa relates to the Mykonian architecture. The collaboration with the renowned Swiss beauty brand Valmont guarantees a high-end quality offered in simple yet sophisticated new place within Bill & Coo.

of treatments with a flair for blending refinement and unsurpassed anti-aging effectiveness. Valmont has created beauty rituals and intensive treatment programs for every need, in order to counter the effects of time on the face, body and even the hair. Through unique and exclusive protocols, Valmont treatments stand out thanks to the "butterfly motions" that characterizes the technique. Much more than a traditional beauty procedure, Valmont treatments are fashioned as symphonic variations. the project

"The Stoa of Philip V is located near the Sacred Harbour, a continuation of the Agora of the Competaliasts, just south of the Sacred Temple of Apollo: the Stoa of Philip, with the South Stoa, delineate both sides of the Sacred Way towards the Propylaea, creating a monumental access route to the Sanctuary, lined with numerous bases for votive figurative statues along its length.

The Stoa is an offering to Apollo from Philip V of Macedon and was constructed at the end of the 3rd century / beginning of 2nd century BC, possibly as a form of response to the construction of the South Stoa by the Attalids. It is a long building, approximately 71 metres in length and 11 metres in width, built from grey-white marble. Its central façade faced east towards the Sacred Way and featured a colonnade of 16 Doric columns, its end symmetrical to jambs and walls with four windows each. The remaining sides of the building were made up of solid walls. The building was extended a few years after its construction (perhaps even by 180 BC), both in length and in breadth. On the west side, an additional stoa was added, measuring 10,37 metres by 89,22 metres, with a colonnade facing the harbour and sharing a back wall with the Stoa of Philip V. On the north side, a room closed on three sides with a western ionic colonnade was added as a continuation of the original stoa's back wall" says mrs Dimitra Mavrokordatou, architectural engineer and Project Supervisor.

Today, only the building's foundations survive, but a plethora of archaeological parts have been collected both inside, near the outer walls of the structure (almost 800) and in the immediate surrounding area (almost 1000). "The impressive entablature featuring the characteristic architrave with the dedication inscription "The king of the Macedonians, Philippos, son of the King Demetrios, dedicates this to Apollo" survives almost in its entirety. Today, this has been placed along the length of the structure, on the Sacred Way, in front of the colonnade" continues mrs Mavrokordatou.

A stoa is a type of structure commonly found in sanctuaries, agoras and other gathering places in antiquity, with the purpose of protecting visitors from weather conditions. In ancient sanctuaries, stoas were used to house pilgrims during the day and the night, while in agoras they were used either as permanent stores or temporary stalls. The construction of large-scale stoas spread during the Hellenistic ages and were usually offerings of powerful leaders to a sanctuary or a city, much like the Stoa of Philip V.

"In terms of managing, protecting and showcasing the monuments of Delos, the Ephorate of Antiquities of the Cyclades has designed a programme of comprehensive interventions that aim not only to preserve our precious heritage from the relentless effects of time in the extreme conditions of the Cyclades, but also to make the site understandable and accessible to visitors, while also revealing the grandeur of this sacred island.

The restoration of the Stoa of Philip V, with a total budget of 550 million euro, is funded by the Paul & Alexandra Canellopoulos Foundation and is implemented by the Ephorate of Antiquities of Cyclades. Upon the completion of the project, the monument façade will be restored following the restoration/completion of the foundations and the euthynteria, and the reconstruction of part of the stylobate/toichobate with new ancient materials on the façade and narrow sides of the structure. Also, the façade colonnade will be partially restored with ancient salvaged materials, and finally, sections of the walls of the façade and the side walls will be restored" says mrs Mavrokordatou. In the meantime, the relevant classification of architectural parts not used in the reconstruction will have also taken place and will be organised into specially designated areas.

"Work on the project began in the summer of 2017. The first phase involved cleaning the structure's interior space, the extension and surrounding areas, necessary in order to record the current condition of the monument and

The Stoa of Philip V is located near the Sacred Harbour of Delos. The restoration is implemented by the Ephorate of Antiquities of Cyclades.

The restoration will add a 3D aspect to the archaeological site to collect all the relevant architectural parts. Moreover, all the ancient pieces from the structure and the extension were identified, numbered and recorded, and special architectural fragments were designed. During the second phase of the project, in the middle of autumn, the thick vegetation in the inaccessible marshland area on the west of the Stoa was cleared, an expanse of almost 600 square metres where, according to archival material, many pieces of the structure and its extension were deposited in the early 19th century. After this cleaning intervention, the findings of ancient materials was impressive, as more than 1.000 pieces were found, 900 of which could be identified as belonging to the Stoa. The exhausting work of the methodical recovery, identification and temporary classification of the findings was completed by specialized personnel. In December 2017, the third phase of the project was completed, during which approximately 300 architectural pieces from the other two areas near the harbour were discovered (in thick vegetation), identified and recorded. At the same time, the three-dimensional representation of architectural fragments began.

This work was completed in 2018. At the same time, the current condition of the monument was recorded using photogrammetry. A drone of the Ephorate of Antiquities of Cyclades took images of the site following a fully-automated process, designed in the framework of a highly accurate geographic basis. The result is firstly geometrically precise, since this process ensures optimal flight data (altitude, aerial photography, positioning of camera in space etc.), and secondly, ensures a comprehensive total number of shots, in this case over 1000, from a low altitude of 10 metres above the ground. Lastly, recently in June 2018, began the preliminary works for installing a bridge crane on the long eastern side of the monument. The installation of the bridge crane is expected to be completed within 2018" says mrs Mavrokordatou. There are numerous benefits that will come of this restoration project. "First and foremost, is the protection of the numerous architectural parts that are currently dispersed throughout the site, which will be conserved, classified and some even replaced on the actually monument, thus liberating it and making it more accessible. Also, the restoration of one of the finest monuments on Delos in an area where most structures survive only as ruins will add a three-dimensional aspect to the most important part of the archaeological site" stresses mrs Mavrokordatou.

If when the name Mykonos comes to mind, you think about endless parties, then you miss an important part of the religious tradition of the island.

Churches and chapels (approximately) exist on the island of Mykonos. Modern churches are built as a religious act of devotion or to commemorate where a miracle is believed to have taken place. Furthermore chapels and churches were built to place the bones of dead family members in a shrine.

INSIDE STATES

Natural born or naturalized Mykonians, they share the same love for their beautiful island. Meet the islanders!

Dimitris Passaliadis, the successful businessman and owner of Remezzo for the past 5 years, has taken Mykonos' renowned haunt a notch higher, keeping alive the myth of one of the oldest classic hangouts on the Island of the Winds. Rather reticent at the beginning, he put all his love and devotion into this meeting point of the international jet set and it all paid off impressively well. Passaliadis identifies himself with Mykonos, its history and what it represents, since he is also a man from Mykonos who knows his homeland well. Working for Remezzo is a stress factor in itself, he admits, and yet it is also his personal psychotherapy and his escape to creativity. He feels complete doing the things which make him content and seem to work at the same time. Therefore, he feels obliged to carry on the tradition which began 50 years ago, confident that his best-loved bar-restaurant is the absolute choice of every visitor.

To the demanding audience of Mykonos, made up of both Greeks and visitors from all over the world who inevitably compare Mykonos with the top spots around the world, Remezzo continues to offer the most beautiful sunsets and the best parties ever.

As for the owner's next plans, more surprises are on the way!

Born in Delos, Irene is one of the few people on the planet that can declare the uninhabited Delos as her origin. Her father was a worker for the French Archaeological School and a farmer and one of the few people who had a small house in Delos. "I've grown up in Delos and Rhenia and my influences are very clear. I worked in Delos too for ten years and I raised my daughter Georgia there. I carry its charm and magic with me always." She's of an artistic nature that doesn't fit in moulds, but reproduces in the most authentic way with mosaic tiles, representations of Delos in small art objects up to large frescoes, floors and pools that adorn villas in Mykonos and Greece, as well as all over the world, from Australia to America. "What I do is very particular, but I'm not forced into doing things that I don't like. It's heavy work, with stone and cement, but I won't change it for anything, even if I'm living in cosmopolitan Mykonos." She chooses a quiet, bohemian life. "Mosaic work is a bit lonely. I don't want to be in the middle of things and my workshop/shop is in an alley off the centre. All the guides pass through there, because it's one of the few chances that tourists have to see me up close, cutting with hammer and anvil, just as it was done in ancient times and buy a completely authentic Delos art object."

Nicknames follow Mykonians for generations until they "seal" the surname itself. So it is with Yiannis, who's a Mykonian by birth, whose nickname, given to his father, Manolis, who's origin is from Limnos, follows him. "My mother had this lot as a dowry in Aghios Stefanos and my father's dream was to make a traditional Greek taverna there. Despite many objections from the family he did it in 1995." His dream has been a reality for 23 years now. "We love what we do and we keep a pure Mykonian identity with honest food and honest prices. Even the lamb chops, which are our specialty, originate to a large degree from Delos and Mykonos farms." Sport and fishing is what he loves to do when relaxing. His favourite place on the island: "my quiet home, with no neighbours, with a beautiful view of Delos and the port." He would like to regulate the traffic issue on the island, "the traffic on the roads and the many umbrellas on the beaches bug me", but there's the winter, so for six months there's quiet on the island. Every evening, wherever he is, at work or at home, he spends a few minutes watching the sun set behind Delos. "I find myself remarking how lucky I am to have this view every day." The energy that its light broadcasts inspires him to keep the Mykonian identity of the shop, while he doesn't want to skimp on the quality.

The first Beefbar was created by Riccardo Giraudi in Monte Carlo in 2005 and in thirteen years spread, together with its fame to Hong Kong and New York. Let me open a parenthesis. If you take a look at social media, you'll see many international jet-set personages posing, holding its famous mini burgers pinned with the small flags or taking selfies among cocktails with a background of the "snowy landscapes" of Kobe. You might be wondering if there's any significance in me mentioning this. Everything plays its part. Although the Beefbars remain absolutely true to the incomparable quality of their ingredients, as well as the way it's handled. And that's where they score all the goals. Parenthesis closed. So, after those cosmopolitan moves, its coming to Mykonos in 2015, did not seem out of place. Then, it had attached itself to the famous Nammos, as a corner of the restaurant and three years later it became independent, in one of the most charming and luxurious seaside hotels of the island, the Bill & Coo Coast of Theodosis Kakoutis, in Aghios Ioannis.

Beefbar on the Coast has a good aura and the front rotundas in the sand with the mulberries and the sea nearby filling the frame, create a relaxing setting, that puts you in a zen mood to even take your shoes off. The preparation board dominates the space, with a bunch of arrayed vegetables like in a greengrocer's, bursting with freshness. Then your eyes go to the fridge with the Australian Black Angus, the American Wagyu from the Snake River farms and of course, the Rolls Royce of meats, the Kobe beef. In 2014, Giraudi became the first and largest importer of certified Japanese Kobe in Europe. Of course, all these velvety meats need the corresponding touch on the grill and this is where the Mykonian base of Beefbar starts to become more interesting. The restaurant's menu, apart from the classic specialties that can be found in all the branches, has the gustatory curation of the executive chef of the Bill & Coo hotels, Ntinos Fotinakis. He's a first breed) that was born and raised in the Hyogo prefecture, near Kobe. Bred in the tradition since 1200, the cattle is fed with fresh & clean water, and a mix of crop silage (grass, rice straws, corn) for 900 days, in a relaxing and stress-free environment. Therefore, the meat reaches the highest level of marbling (also called "sashi" in Japan). To be certified as Kobe, and to receive the Emperor's symbol (the Chrysantemum stamp), the meat has to follow 10 golden rules such as: born and raised in the Hyogo prefecture; Japanese Black breed: between 28 and 60 months; specific weight; sold in Hyogo... Kobe beef is slightly firm, putting up the barest resistance to the fork. Its nutty flavor is deep, delicate, refined.

class chef, who has matured for thirteen years in the kitchen of Spondi restaurant. Ntinos grew with the restaurant, stood next to very significant chefs, Arnaud Bignon for instance, who he (literally) gets emotional about, spent his cooking youth there, celebrated the first and then the second Michelin star there, he took, learned, lived the pulse and when the wings started budding on his back, left the security of a big house for his next dreams. So, he found himself in Mykonos and took over Bill & Coo, an excellent and acclaimed restaurant, from Athinagoras Kostakos, but by all indications, his involvement with Beefbar has for him the same importance. I felt it immediately, tasting the fantastic spinach pie with greens and herbs, which he gathers from the surrounding area, feta cheese and a masterfully baked crust worthy of a seminar. Really, despite the restraint exercises I had practiced all morning, I couldn't resist it and if I hadn't known what was to follow, I would have wrapped another one up and taken it to the hotel. A unique Beefbar patent worldwide, where Fotinakis also has a part and sends it "elsewhere", is the Kobe Beef gyros pitta. The pastry, baked in the oftos manner, is his grandmother's traditional recipe and the tzatziki has been woven so delicately, confirming once again his advanced dexterity, as well as his desire to orchestrate the ingredients of the dishes harmoniously, without losing their expressiveness, exactly as it happens in the significant gastronomic restaurants. He also brought out a really proper ceviche sea bass in the beginning, but he had the "misfortune" to bring it out with the unique jamon de buey de Kobe, a cold meat like no other. Its steep price attests to that. Very good were the quesadillas de la casa with kobe and angus.

I also find the restaurant's ordering flexibility very clever. So, if you want, you choose two or three little items from the menu, you open a bottle of wine or just a glass and with less than €80 per person (don't forget, you're in Beefbar and in Mykonos), you spend a very pleasant lunch or supper. They have absolutely no issues with what you order and they don't look at you askance if you don't choose one of the meats that will inevitably raise the bill sky high. But if your pocket can stand it, definitely try the provocatively delicious wagyu reserve (although you should go without the signature spice mix, because it kicks somewhat in the small pieces), from the Snake River farm or the very high level and unbelievably delicate emperor's cut from the precious Kobe range.

I would be remiss, if I didn't applaud Guillaume Reboul's robust technique in grilling the meats. Personally though, next time I go, I'll completely surrender myself to Fotinaki's silky potato puree with truffles, that accompanies the meats, which fortunately is served independently. Leave some space for the desserts, which bear the signature of the very talented pastry chef Angela Simos. We knew her from her very worthwhile work at Bill & Coo, during Kostakos tenure. The bitter chocolate with a layer of caramel in between, is a dainty sweet, whose recipe I would like to have on my fridge door, with the condition that I can make it, when I seek something that will lift my mood.

Cosmopolitan, traditional, creative, alternative and exotic, you will be enchanted by the Mykonian restaurants.

BEEFBAR ON THE COAST IN MYKONOS

Beefbar breaks tradition with the rigid codes of high end steakhouses. Riccardo Giraudi envisioned a destination for discerning carnivores with a modern feel. The concept works on contrasts: unpretentious food yet extremely high quality products. The architecture is both sober & luxurious. These are the general characteristics, but Beefbar on the Coast in Mykonos also breaks tradition with all the other Beefbars, as it is the only located next to the sea. So unique, so different, so Beefbar on the Coast in Mykonos. Agbios Ioannis, +30 6956600169, 22890 77865, mykonos.beefbar.com

CHRISTOS DRAZOS

INSIDE DONNIN

Four ways to enjoy a short break in Athens in the beart of the summer and 18 reasons to stroll around the city and make the most out of it.

THE CLASSIC ROUTE

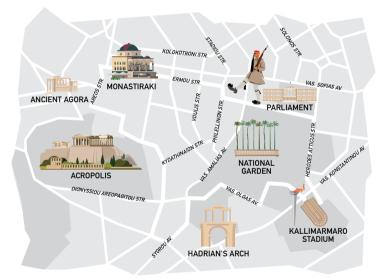

After the Cycladic landscape and the island architecture, the ancient buildings of the Classical period in Athens are the perfect finale to your Greek experience. Climb to the top of the Sacred Rock, admire the Parthenon and then take a scenic walk to the Acropolis Museum (theacropolismuseum.gr). There you will have the chance to live again the "ascent", but this time within the museum grounds, observing the exhibits on your way up. Following in the steps of history, don't miss a visit to the Museum of Greek Folk Art (melt.gr) and its traditional buildings, such as the Bath House of the Winds and the Museum of Musical Instruments. Stop at the brand new Spit Jack meat restaurant (spitjack.gr) and use up the rest of your time to admire the design gems at Forget Me Not (forgetmenotathens.gr) and the art jewelry on 18 Frynihou Str. store.

THE ART ROUTE

Start with a coffee in one of the city's finest gardens, the café of the Numismatic Museum in Athens (nummus.gr). Walk on to Benaki's central building to visit the periodical exhibition titled "Photographs of Joan Leigh Fermor: Artist and Lover" (23/5-21/10, benaki.gr) and then head to the Museum of Cycladic Art for the unique first exhibition of George Condo in Greece (until 14/10, cycladic.gr). It's time for a coffee and snack at the cosmopolitan Zonars (zonarsathens.gr). After that the endless list of choices for your night outing are bound to keep you downtown.

THE AGORA ROUTE

A visit to the Acropolis is considered complete only when you have seen the Ancient Agora, where the city's social life once flourished. The Stoa of Attalos houses a museum which hides many surprise artefacts associated with the everyday and political life of the Athenians. On exiting the Temple of Hephaestus, head to Thission, where you will discover Herakleidon Museum, a museum about technology and the arts (herakleidon-art.gr). Stop for brunch at the The Underdog and try their award-winning coffee (underdog.gr). It's now time to unwind a little at the state-of-the-art Hammam Baths (hammam.gr) and off you go for the last unique romantic experience in the city: a movie night at the Cine Thisio open air cinema (cine-thisio.gr).

THE FUN ROUTE

The rhythm of the night is pounding strong around Agia Irini square and that is no coincidence. You see, here you will find one of the best bars in the world, The Clumsies (theclumsies.gr), where you will taste ingenious drinks and watch almost the entire city walk by. Then again if you are eager to check out the city's first vermoutherie, head to Odori (2 Skouleniou Str.) and get flabbergasted by its flavours. For a more evocative ambience Noel is your number one choice (noelbar.gr).

Clockwise: A romantic walk in Plaka during the sunset, the Acropolis Museum, the "green" Cycladic Cafe offers Greek delicacies at Museum of Cycladic Art, a view from the Roman Agora just next to the Ancient Agora, a drink and the entrance of The Clumsies.
